'Perfect Model' Wins New Chance

N. E. A. Staff Special.
SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Audrey Munson is again on her way to fame and fortune!

This after ostracism, poverty, hunger.

She has obtained an opportunity to star in a moving picture production that, it is promised, will outshine "Purity" and "Inspiration," in which she won world-wide celebrity.

Audrey Munson—famous as the victim of a murder and public opinion combined, they dragged her from the heights of fame to the depths of despair.

POSED FOR FAMOUS ART.
She had posed for much of the wonderful art at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, including the Koni "Column of Progress" and "Descending Night." She was the original of Daniel Chester French's "Evangeline" in Central park, New York, and "Suffering Humanity" in the Booth memorial in London.

Artists and sculptors vied for her services, moving picture producers competed for her, theatrical managers pursued her.

THE WILKINS MURDER.
The night of February 27, 1919, the police received a call from the Long Island summer home of Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins, a physician of 67, his wife had been beaten to death with a hammer.

At first the authorities accepted Dr. Wilkins' statement that burglars had attacked himself and his wife.

Then came the discovery of Mrs. Wilkins' will, bequeathing $75,000 to her husband. Also the discovery that Audrey Munson and her mother, who had lived in the Wilkins' home in New York, had disappeared.

It was said the Munsions had left Wilkins' place several days before the murder because Dr. Wilkins had annoyed the young woman. He was reported as having said to her: "Don't ever get married. If you do you will lose your symmetrical figure."

DOCTOR KILLS SELF.
Dr. Wilkins was tried, convicted, sentenced—and committed suicide, protesting his innocence in a death note.

But Audrey Munson had become known to the world as "the woman in the case." She had been found in Canada, where she had taken refuge, but had refused to return to testify in the trial.

It availed nothing that Dr. Wilkins in his cell had branded reports that he was interested in the beautiful model as a "rural life."

It availed nothing that she issued a statement in Canada that she was there in connection with her motion picture work and that the doctor's attitude toward her had been a proper one.

ALL TURN AGAINST HER.
When Audrey Munson returned to America, she found every door closed against her.

"The Wilkins' case has ruined my life," she moaned. "The public used to love and admire me. Now all I find everywhere is hate."

where they spent holidays with relatives.

Mrs. J. K. Howe has as her guest her brother, Marion White, of Jupiter, Idaho.

Miss Traverse Haws of Holbrook, left for her home after spending about two months in Tremonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sleson returned from Hingham, where they were the guests of relatives.

LIVING IN POVERTY.
Meanwhile mother and daughter lived in one furnished room, cooking their meagre meals on a tiny gas plate attached to a jet.

Finally, after five weeks of tramping the streets in search of a job, while her mother sold kitchenware from door to door, Audrey Munson disappeared from Syracuse.

But finally she has been found again back in the furnished room, which the Munsions will leave forever.

WINS NEW OPPORTUNITY.
The look of suffering and emaciation is gone. She's happy and hopeful. "I finally found an influential friend," she says. "It was a company that couldn't offer me employment itself, but interceded in my behalf with a film concern—what one I mustn't tell."

"I've been given an advantageous contract—and an opportunity to come back. I'm only 27—think of it—and I have time to build a new career. We'll succeed, too, won't we mother?"

And Audrey Munson's one true friend in trial and trouble, smiled back. "We'll try real hard."

The question is: Will public opinion let her?

Delivering Health and Comfort Economically

You will find this is a typical scene in hundreds of intermountain homes—a woman happy in the possession of an electric range, with its cleanliness, its economy, its convenience and its superiority in cooking.

Those who are served by the Utah Power & Light Company enjoy the use of electric ranges at a RATE FOR CURRENT NO HIGHER THAN THEY PAID BEFORE THE WAR. It is an exceedingly low rate—only 3 cents a kilowatt hour—and is effective for the operation of all electric heating and cooking appliances.

Complete enjoyment of the electric range—of any electric appliance—is possible only when you can depend absolutely upon a uniform, adequate supply of current. Customers of the Utah Power & Light Company have positive assurance of this essential factor, for they receive power from one of the largest and most completely equipped hydro-electric systems in the country. More than thirty generating plants are available for producing current, while the transmission system is so perfect as to meet every emergency in carrying power to your home.
